1. General.—a. Abbreviations contained in these regulations are authorized for use in the preparation of military records, publications, correspondence, and in field work between elements of the Army. They are in no case authorized for joint use between the Army and the other military departments, although some of these abbreviations have been jointly approved. When it is desired to employ abbreviations in a communication to another military department, or element thereof, and to a joint activity or a unified commander, those abbreviations listed in JANAP 169 (available approximately 15 January 1954) will be used exclusively.

b. The use of abbreviations to conserve time and space is not required in all types of material but is authorized provided that complete understanding is assured. Abbreviations will not be used if uncertainty or ambiguity may result.

c. Abbreviations commonly used in technical channels may be used between similar offices.

d. Common abbreviations prescribed in standard dictionaries may be used provided that they are not in conflict with those prescribed herein.

e. Abbreviations listed herein will not be used in any message, order, publication, or correspondence circulated outside the Army establishment or between Allied Armies of the Ground Forces of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

2. Derivations.—In general, nouns are listed only in the singular form and verbs in the present tense. The abbreviation, without being changed, normally may be used to signify any of the various derivatives of the root word (al, ally, ance, ed, er, ian, ies, ility, ing, ive, ly, ment, n, r, s, ze, etc.) provided that the meaning will be clear.

3. Combinations.—Related abbreviations may be written without spacing when desirable unless the resulting combined abbreviation has been assigned a different meaning or the entire term has been assigned a separate abbreviation (AGC is the abbreviation for Adjutant General's Corps—Adj Gen Corps is not authorized). Prescribed abbreviations of groups of words must be used as such and may not be broken for use singly (the A in AGC stands for adjutant but adj is the abbreviation for the word adjutant standing alone). Those abbreviations preceded by an asterisk (*) may be used only in combination and will not be used alone.

4. Capitalization.—Each abbreviation will be written in capital letters and without periods in electrically transmitted messages, and in other material when the abbreviation stands for a combination of words. Abbreviations will otherwise be written in lower case letters provided that, when used as a proper noun or with an individual's name to denote title, grade, or component, or as the first word in a sentence, the initial letter will be capitalized in the same manner as in the word for which it stands.

5. Use in messages.—Abbreviations are especially desirable in electrically transmitted messages; however, the possibility of garbling necessitates extreme caution in the use of abbreviations consisting of less than four letters, particularly in classified messages. Abbreviations listed in these regulations preceded by a crosshatch (#) are not authorized for use in electrically transmitted messages.

6. Abbreviations alphabetically listed.
